| Otago     | Princes Street Reserve, Dunedin. | A. R. P.1 2 16 | This Reserve was made in 1851 by Governor Sir George Grey, upon the recommendation of Mr. Mantell, the then Commissioner of Crown Lands at Dunedin, for the use of the Natives of Otago, as a place for drawing up their boats and other purposes. It consists of a very irregular narrow strip, but presents an extensive frontage to the main street of the city. It was used by the Natives in the way described until the year 1861, when, during the rush of people consequent on the discovery of the goldfields, it was taken up by squatters who obtained licenses to occupy from the Commissioner of Crown Lands. Shortly after this the Provincial Government of Otago made application to the General Government to have the property handed over for Provincial purposes, on the ground that the land, before being constituted a Native Reserve, had formed part of the town of Dunedin; had been divided into allotments for sale, then withdrawn and set apart for harbour purposes. This, however, appeared a mere matter of intention on the part of the original founders of the city, as no instrument could be found which could be considered to have the effect of dedicating the land formally to such an object. It is contended that if the New Zealand Company had a discretionary power as to the specific mode of dealing with the land, which may be inferred from the fact that a portion of the same shore was withdrawn from sale and given by the Company as an endowment for the Presbyterian Church, which now holds it. The Crown which succeeded to the rights of the Company, had a like power. Moreover, in the setting apart this land as a Native Reserve, it would appear that Governor Grey was only performing a tardy act of justice to the Native sellers of the Otago Block, who were entitled by the terms of the original scheme of the Company to have reserved for their benefit one acre to every ten of the allotments sold in the town of Dunedin, and which, as soon as the town was surveyed, were to be selected on the same principle as had obtained in the other settlements of the Company, with the difference, however, that the Governor was to select them. (See Captain Symonds' report on the purchase of the Otago Block, and Parliamentary Papers 1844-5.) In 1865, in consequence of a favorable report emanating from a Select Committee of the House of Representatives on the claims of the Corporation of Dunedin, a Crown Grant was issued to the Superintendent of Otago. In opposition to the effect of this grant, the Natives appealed to the Native Lands Court, and to the Supreme Court to have their claims considered, but owing to the land being held under Crown Grant, the first named Court could not deal with it, and the decision of the Supreme Court was adverse. On an application to the Court of Appeal the Natives were again defeated. From rents paid for holdings on this land the sum of £6,908 18s 9d appears to have accumulated. |
