

EXPLANATION.

Each military district is subdivided into four battalion subdivisions or groups, shown by dotted lines, these groups being again subdivided into areas designated by numbers. The figures above the line are areas 1 to 32 now being established as transition, the figures below the line will be the areas 1 to 56 as proposed by Lord Kitchener to be eventually established. Officers commanding districts are to allot the area boundaries within the battalion subdivision or groups to suit their varied local conditions.
