

I regret to hear that since the camp ended Major Hughes has developed scarlet-fever. As I understand you attended him during his last few days in camp, you may be in a position to account for his present illness.

Of the medical cases, diarrhoea was the most prevalent, several cases of a severe type.

Amongst the more serious surgical cases treated in camp were a case of concussion of the brain, a scalp wound, and a case of fracture of ribs.

Four cases left camp to be treated in their own houses, and eight had to be removed to the Greytown Hospital.

Colonel Purdy, Director of Medical Services,
Wellington.

I have, &c.,
WILLIAM BEY, Lieut.-Colonel.
